

HOW YOUR DOLLARS HELP STOP THE CYCLE.

Follow the path that Sam takes to heal from his experience of abuse and how your dollars help along the way.

Sam tells his parents that he does not want to go to soccer practice anymore because he does not like the way the coach touches him.

Break the Cycle

Police observe the interview and have enough evidence to thoroughly investigate the allegation to keep Sam and other children safer.

Start the Healing

Sam's parents call the police. The police schedule an interview with Ralston House.

A trained Forensic Interviewer talks one-on-one with Sam, builds rapport, and talks with Sam about what is going on at soccer practice. Sam's parents talk with a Victim Advocate at Ralston House to find out about therapy resources and next steps in helping their child begin to heal.

Ralston House services are FREE to families. Ralston House works with law enforcement, district attorneys, and social service agencies in Adams, Broomfield, Gilpin, and Jefferson counties.
